

Maker Education Certificate Program

SACRAMENTO STATE
COLLEGE OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Departmental Application for Admission

Dear Applicant:

The Certificate in Maker Education program engages students in a 12 credit program designed to develop critical knowledge of making, the maker movement, and Maker Education. We will examine the ideas and practices associated with educational reforms that emphasize making as an ethos of interest driven do-it-yourself (DIY) learning and culture. Students will investigate the knowledge, skills, and dispositions associated with 21st century skill development in makerspaces as formal and informal learning environments, and the development of “maker culture” in local, national, and international communities.

Application Process

This certificate program consists of four courses for a total of 12 units. Some courses will be offered online. Successful completion of the certificate requires students to receive a 2.5 or higher GPA in all courses. Courses focus on the theory of maker education and also require students to conduct research in their communities to learn what resources may be needed to create or support a makerspace.

The university requires certain standards for admission to the Maker Education Certificate program. Applicants interested in completing the certificate program must provide the following items for acceptance into the program:

1. A completed Maker Education Certificate program application
2. A non-refundable $30 application fee with submission of application. Submit check payable to College of Continuing Education, Sacramento State, via mail with application
3. One set of unofficial transcripts from all post-secondary institutions from which degrees/certificates have been granted and all institutions where relevant coursework has been pursued
4. Verification of an earned bachelor’s degree
5. Verification of an overall minimum 2.5 grade point average in the last 60 semester of 90 quarter units completed in the undergraduate degree
